National Arts Club is located across the street from Gramercy Park on East 20th Street, between Park Avenue South and Third Avenue

National Arts Club Founded in 1898 by Charles de Kay, the literary and art critic for The New York Times, the National Arts Club was a gathering place for artists, patrons and audiences in all the arts. Eventually moving in 1906 to the historic Tilden Mansion that was built in the 1840s on the west side of Gramercy Park that underwent a massive overhaul in the 1870s -- it was considered among the most beautiful mansions in New York. Now, it is both a New York Landmark and a National Historic Landmark -- and continues to inspire artists from around the world.
